The first two minutes

A lead has landed. Nobody has touched it yet.

The instant someone sends the form, two things happen before any human has read it: a text says we have it and will call today, and an email plays back what they told us. Nobody is left wondering whether the message arrived, or tempted to ring someone else while they wait. Behind it, the clock starts. Time to first contact is the one number that moves everything else in this pipeline.

We have your enquiry, Emma

Hi Emma,

Thanks for getting in touch. We have your enquiry and one of the family will call you, usually the same working day.

Here is what you told us:

Property	Home
Needs doing	Underfloor, Roof or ceiling
Building stage	Existing building (retrofit)
Timeframe	Next 1 to 3 months
Postcode	3930

If any of that is wrong, just reply to this email and we will fix it.

What happens next:

1. We call you for a 15 minute chat about the building.
2. If it looks like a fit, we book a site assessment.
3. You get a written quote with no obligation.

We cannot price spray foam insulation properly without seeing the building, so nobody is going to quote you a number over the phone. The call is to work out whether it is the right answer for you at all.

Glenn

Echoing their answers back cuts "did that go through?" replies and catches a wrong postcode before it wastes a site visit.

ALERTS THAT INTERRUPT

ACT NOW New enquiry · Whoever it is assigned to, by SMS and in-app

A website enquiry has been created and assigned. The message carries their name, number, property type, what needs doing, timeframe, postcode and where they came from, so it can be acted on without opening the CRM.

Fires when: a new enquiry has just come in.

ACT NOW Lead unattended for an hour · Whoever it is assigned to and Glenn, by SMS

A new enquiry has sat in the first stage for an hour of business time. The card is reassigned to the office at the same moment, so this is a handover as well as a warning.

Fires when: a new enquiry has sat untouched for an hour.

UNATTENDED 60 MIN: Emma 0412 345 678. Reassigned to office.

TASKS THAT PERSIST UNTIL CLOSED

CALL Emma: new enquiry, Underfloor, Roof or ceiling

WHOEVER IT IS ASSIGNED TO Due: 1 hour

Ring the new enquiry. The acknowledgement text and email have already gone, so this is the first human contact. Have their answers on screen: property type, what needs doing, timeframe and postcode. If it is a job worth having, move the card to Qualified. If you cannot reach them, log the attempt and the chase takes over.

Escalation. 15 minutes: reminder to the assigned user. 60 minutes: SMS to the assigned user and Glenn, reassigned to the office. 4 hours: SMS to Glenn again. Next morning: top of the daily digest until it moves. Business hours only, so a midnight enquiry starts its clock at 7am.

Five tries, then an honest close

At least one attempt made. No two-way conversation yet.

Five attempts over seven days across call, text and email, and then it stops. The last message says plainly that we are closing the enquiry off and nothing is lost, which is the message people answer. The sequence pauses the moment they reply or book, and it is capped, so a card never rots here: if the seventh day passes it goes to Lost with the reason Unreachable. Along the way, anyone who books the fifteen minute phone call, from the website or from the assistant, gets the confirmation and reminders in the second group.

A real job, a real number

We have spoken to them and it is a job we want.

This is where a deal becomes real. On the call we have confirmed the building type, the areas, the access, the timeframe, and that we are talking to whoever decides. Everything before this stage was administration. A forecast value is set for the first time, as a default estimate by property type rather than a guess at a price, and the customer is pointed at the calendar to book the assessment. Spray foam cannot be quoted without seeing the building, and a rig should not cross the state before the job is qualified, so the phone call qualifies and the visit prices.

We come and look

A date and time for the site visit are in the diary.

One confirmation with the address and the hour it takes, one text on the morning, and a text when the crew are close. The estimator gets a task for the day and reads the enquiry beforehand, so the visit starts with "you mentioned the floors" rather than "so what are we looking at". Three things can go wrong here and all three are handled: the visit moves, they cancel it, or the crew arrives and cannot get in. The last one is the expensive one.

Why our number might look different

Hi Emma,

If you are comparing quotes, one thing is worth knowing, because it is the reason two numbers for the "same" job can look nothing alike.

Insulation is sold on R-value, and R-value is measured on a flat, perfect, uninterrupted sample. Nothing in that test involves a stud, a pipe, a downlight, an untidy edge or wind.

A real wall has all of those. Cut products leave edges, edges leave gaps, and air moves through gaps carrying heat with it. That path is not in the rating at all, which is why two walls rated the same can feel completely different to live in.

We wrote the whole thing up here, with a diagram: sprayitsolutions.com.au/spray-foam#r-value

Not trying to talk you out of anything. Just make sure you are comparing the finished wall, not the number on the bag.

The bit about R-value nobody explains

Hi Emma,

You mentioned the timing was not right, which is fair enough. Here is something worth knowing before you get to the point of comparing quotes.

R-value is measured on a flat, perfect, uninterrupted sample. Nothing in that test involves a stud, a pipe, a downlight, an untidy edge or wind. A real wall has all of those, and air moving through gaps carries heat with it.

Which is why two walls rated the same can feel completely different.

The full explanation, with a diagram of both walls: sprayitsolutions.com.au/spray-foam#r-value

No rush from us. When it comes back around, we will be here.

Where the heat actually goes

Hi Emma,

A third of your heating leaves through the roof, more through the walls, and the rest through the floor. The floor is the one almost nobody insulates, and it is the one people notice most once it is done.

There is an interactive version of this on our site. Scroll and the house seals itself while the meter drops:

GLENN Due: Quarterly

Quarterly review of the nurture list. Remove anyone who is not a real job, and move anyone who has come back to Qualified. A clean list keeps the emails landing in inboxes rather than in spam.

The moment they say yes

Status set to Won. The card keeps moving, now on the delivery half of the board.

Won is a status, not a stage, and it is marked when the customer accepts, not when the job is done or paid. Setting it does three things at once: thanks them and lays out the four steps from here, kills every sales sequence on the card so a quote chase can never fire at someone whose job is booked, and hands the office two tasks. Deposits are taken on some jobs and not others, so a deposit is a field on the card rather than a gate: where one applies, the request goes out and a one-line text confirms it when it lands.

ALERTS THAT INTERRUPT

WIN Quote accepted · Glenn and The office, by SMS

A job has been marked Won. It names the job and the value, and it is the signal to raise the deposit invoice and pick a date and a crew.

Fires when: a customer has accepted a quote.

WON: Emma Walsh, Mount Eliza, $6,400. Deposit request sent. Schedule it.

WIN Deposit received · The office, by In-app

A deposit has been recorded against the card. Scheduling is unblocked, and the customer has been told the date will be confirmed within three business days.

Fires when: a deposit has arrived.

DEPOSIT IN: Emma, $1,000. Lock the date.

TASKS THAT PERSIST UNTIL CLOSED

INVOICE Emma: deposit

THE OFFICE Due: 1 day, where a deposit applies

Send the deposit invoice, on the jobs that take one. The amount is already on the card and the customer has been told to expect it. When the money lands, tick Deposit received, which confirms it to them and unblocks scheduling.

SCHEDULE Emma: allocate crew and date

THE OFFICE Due: 3 days

Pick a start date, a finish date and a crew, put all three on the card, then move it to Scheduled. That sends the booking text and the preparation email by itself.

In the diary

Accepted, with a date and a crew locked.

The booking text points at the email, and the email is the preparation list: clear access, move what you would rather not have dust near, park the rig close, pets elsewhere, someone over eighteen to let us in. It also says the space needs time before it is used again and that the crew will say how long on the day, because re-occupancy depends on the foam and is not a number to guess in writing. The afternoon before, one text asks whether access is clear.

Your job is booked for Monday 13 OctoberHi Emma,

You are in the diary.

Start Monday 13 OctoberFinish Monday 13 OctoberWhere 22 Ranelagh Drive, Mount Eliza VIC 3930Crew DJ

To help us get in and out cleanly, before we arrive:

- Clear access to Underfloor, Roof or ceiling. We need room to work and to get the hose through.
- Move anything you would rather not have dust near.
- Make sure we can park close. The rig runs off the truck.
- Pets somewhere else for the day, please.
- Somebody over 18 on site to let us in.

While we are spraying, the area needs to be empty of people and pets. Afterwards the space needs time before you use it again. That is anywhere from about an hour to a full day depending on which foam the job calls for, and the crew will tell you which applies to yours before they leave.

Anything you are unsure about, ring 0428 26 36 26.Spray It Solutions

Worth checking this list with the crew rather than the office, because the crew know what actually goes wrong on arrival. Re-occupancy is product dependent: as little as an hour for some foams, up to 24 hours for others, so the crew give the figure on the day.

On site

The crew is at the property.

One text on the morning saying the crew is on the way, and a one-tap snippet the crew can send from the app if they are running behind, because the alternative is a customer at the window at half past seven. Done, photographed, billed

Work complete, photos captured, invoice out.

Two emails go out on entry, deliberately separate. The first is the completion note from Glenn with the photos attached and three lines on living with the foam. The second is the invoice from the business, so the paperwork never dilutes the thank-you. A reminder text at day seven and an overdue email at day fourteen, and both stop dead the moment payment is marked, because a reminder sent after someone has paid does more damage than the reminder was worth.

Hi Emma,

The job is finished. Photos of the completed work are attached, along with your paperwork.

What we did:

- Underfloor, Roof or ceiling, using open cell foam
- 140 sqm

Living with it:

- There is nothing to maintain. It does not settle, sag or need topping up.
- If you ever cut into it for a new downlight or a pipe, seal it back up. An opening in a sealed layer costs more than the same opening in an unsealed one.
- You may notice the place holds temperature longer and is quieter. Both are the foam doing its job.

Your invoice is on its way separately.

Thanks for having us.

Decision maker identified. Scale and programme understood.

No automated message here. This stage is a conversation, usually more than one, and an email from a workflow would be noise in it. What the stage produces is a confirmed decision maker, an approximate area, a use for the space, a programme, and whether the building is operating during the works. The value stays at zero. SCOPE Daniel: confirm decision maker and programme

GLENN Due: 5 days

Confirm who decides, the scale and the programme, then put the site address and a site contact on the card. Leave the value at zero: commercial ranges from small to millions, and a guess here makes the forecast worthless.

Boots on site

A site visit is in the diary.

A commercial site visit needs more than an address. The confirmation asks for induction requirements, PPE beyond standard, access arrangements and a site contact, and it offers the insurances and SWMS in advance for their records. The day-before text reminder is the shared one. On an industrial site the visit fails on inductions and permits far more often than on anyone forgetting, so the no-access email names the four things rather than asking what happened.

Hi Daniel,

Confirmed for Wednesday 8 October, 7:30am at 8 Ordish Road, Dandenong South VIC 3175.

Please let us know before the visit:

- Site induction requirements, and how long they take
- PPE beyond standard
- Access arrangements, including any permits or escorts
- A site contact and mobile for the day

We will bring insurances and SWMS. If you need those in advance for your own records, reply and we will send them through.

Hi Daniel,

Confirming the site inspection at 8 Ordish Road, Dandenong South VIC 3175 is cancelled.

The proposal depends on the visit. Product, thickness, access and staging cannot be specified from a drawing, and a number produced without seeing the building is a number we would have to revise later.

Send us a date that works and we will fit around your site. If it is easier, tell us the constraint, a shutdown window, an induction day, a quiet period, and we will propose times inside it.

Hi Daniel,

We attended 8 Ordish Road, Dandenong South VIC 3175 on Wednesday 8 October, 7:30am but could not get onto the area, so the inspection did not happen.

To make sure the next one does, we need these confirmed before the day:

- The induction booked, and how long it takes
- Any permit or escort arranged
- A site contact and a mobile for the day
- Access to the areas being assessed

Give us a date with those in place and we will attend.

Proposal for 8 Ordish Road, Dandenong South VIC 3175 by Wednesday 15 October

Hi Daniel,

Thanks for the time on site today.

We are now working through product, thickness, access, plant and staging for Roof or ceiling, Walls, roughly 4,200 sqm.
You will have the proposal by Wednesday 15 October.

It will include the specification, programme, a SWMS summary and our insurances, so it can go straight into your approval process.

If there is a format your procurement needs it in, or it has to be split into stages for budget reasons, tell us now and we will issue it that way the first time.

Once per caller per day. Sent straight away.

For a trade business where the phone rings while someone is up a ladder, this is the single highest-value automation on the list.

OUT OF HOURS

TEXT Immediately · Inbound SMS outside hours

Once per contact per day, not once per message. Sent straight away.

ALERTS THAT INTERRUPT

ACT NOW Missed call · The office, by SMS

An inbound call to the business number went unanswered. The caller has already had an automatic text back, so this is the reminder that a human still owes them a call.

Fires when: someone rang and nobody picked up.

MISSED CALL: 0412 345 678 (Emma). Text-back sent. Ring them.

ACT NOW Inbound reply · Whoever it is assigned to, by In-app and SMS

A customer has replied by text. Every outbound sequence on that contact pauses the moment it arrives, so nothing automatic talks over a live conversation.

Fires when: a customer has replied to a message.

REPLY from Emma: "Yes, Thursday works. Call after 10."

ACT NOW Negative review or complaint · Glenn, by SMS

A review under four stars, or a contact tagged as a complaint. It carries the rating and the reviewer, so the call can be made the same day.

Fires when: a review under four stars, or a complaint, has come in.

REVIEW 2 stars from A. Customer. Call them today.

ACT NOW Automation failure · Glenn, by Email

A workflow errored, or the website lead webhook returned a failure. It names the workflow and the contact. This is the only alert that means leads may be vanishing silently.

Fires when: something behind the scenes has stopped working.

WORKFLOW FAILED: Lead: New Enquiry on Emma Walsh. Webhook returned 500

TASKS THAT PERSIST UNTIL CLOSED

RING BACK Emma: missed call

THE OFFICE Due: 30 minutes

A call came in and nobody answered. The caller already has a text saying you will ring back, so this is a promise with your name on it.

REPLY Emma: they messaged

WHOEVER IT IS ASSIGNED TO Due: 1 hour

A customer has replied, so every automatic message to them has paused. Answer from the conversations screen in the app, not your own phone, so the reply sits on their card and the pause holds.

Automatic, but never automated. This is how Spray It Solutions looks after people from the first two minutes.

Every word here is a starting point. The tone, the timing and the wording are all yours to change. Tell us what does not sound like you and we will change it.
